1) Our power formula, when used to calculate the power absorbed by a resistor, will always give a ___________ result.
   a) positive          b) negative

2) The equivalent resistance of a set of resistors connected in parallel will always be ___________ than the smallest resistor in the set.
   a) smaller          b) larger
1) Our power formula, when used to calculate the power absorbed by a resistor, will always give a ___________ result.
   a) positive
   b) negative

2) The equivalent resistance of a set of resistors connected in parallel will always be ___________ than the smallest resistor in the set.
   a) smaller
   b) larger